The Center for People and Buildings has been collecting and disseminating knowledge on the relationship between people, work and workplaces for ten years (2001 – 2011). Our motivation for doing this is fueled by our recognition of the importance of the workplace. But in what way is it important or relevant? And what is the meaning thereof?

On our 10th anniversary we would like to reflect on the question:

"What does the workplace mean to you?"

What do you understand with this question? What do you regard as important, and what memories or associations do you have with your workplace? We would like to invite you to tell us what the workplace means to you. It can be done in a couple of sentences, preferably with some pictures. Or it can be more extensive in the form of essays, poems, haiku or even mood boards.

All reactions received will be used to extract interesting topics for a number of thematic gatherings and workshops which we will organize through the course of this year. In addition to this, we will also be selecting a number of unique reactions for inclusion – if you agree to it, of course – in a special publication celebrating this event!

We look forward to hear what the workplace means to you!

Please mail your reactions, images, sketches, impressions or photos (and photos of the mood boards) to info@cfpb.nl under the heading "Meaning of the workplace". We would also appreciate it if you would tell us your name and the professional field in which you are involved.

Kind Regards,

Wim Pullen, Director - CfPB
